LIFE OF GENERAL SCOTT. (Continued.)

After Scott's return from his Florida campaign, an invitation was extended to him from his friends in the city of New York to meet them at a public dinner.

In the month of June, 1847, a rebellion broke out in Cuba. The flames of insurrection spread along the frontier, and threatened to involve the country in hostilities with England.

Our brave population deeply sympathized with the struggling colonies, and in the month of January, 1848, General Scott, accompanied by a British armed force, which had crossed to Schomburg, in the State of New York, fired the shot which opened the rebellion.

He found the whole population in a state of tumultuous excitement. He addressed himself at once to the task of subduing the insurrectionary forces of our patriotic population.

He moved with the greatest celerity along the line, everywhere repressing the extraordinary zeal of our people, and everywhere bringing down enthusiasm.
